CGA Board Elections – March 8th

It's time again for CGA's Annual Board Elections to be held on March 8, 2009.

Anyone is welcome at the Annual Board Elections, however only members have the right to vote.

This meeting operates a little differently from our regular Open Membership meetings in that, we discuss year end numbers (adoptions, fosters, donations, etc.), and we have a year in review reflection, where we talk about the wonderful things that happened with CGA in the last year. Then we hold our elections for Board member positions.

Elections will be held for the President, Secretary, and three Board Member-at-Large positions. As an all volunteer organization, it is your participation that makes it work. The more participation we have, the more successful we are.

If you would like to run for a position on the Board, please let me know. Send me an email at couchpups@comcast.net and let me know what position you are interested in.

There are some requirements and you must be a member of CGA for at least 6 months, and be in good standing to be eligible to run for a Board position.

The location will be announced, so keep an eye out on the egroup, or if you don't have access to email, please call me at 303-929-5329 and I'll let you know the location as soon as we finalize it.

This is a POTLUCK! So bring a dish to share! It's really a great time for us to share the accomplishments of the year.

We will also update the membership on what issues we are facing in the coming year and where we need the most help.

IF YOU HAVE WANTED TO PUT A FACE WITH A NAME --- THIS IS THE TIME AND PLACE TO DO IT!!!!

If you have any questions, please let me know.

Important information on seizures

The following is an article published in The Journal of the American Holistic Veterinary Medical Association, in the January-March 2004 issue, pages 17-18.

Authored by H. C Gurney DVM and Janice Gurney B.S., M.A. Aspen Park Veterinary Hospital; Conifer, Colorado. Please consult your our veterinarian with any questions regarding this article.

“A simple, effective technique for arresting canine epileptic seizures”

Abstract

Fifty-one epileptic canine patients were successfully treated during an epileptic seizure with a technique involving the application of ice on the back (T10-L4). This technique was found to be effective in aborting or shortening the duration of ictus (epileptic seizure).

Introduction

The experience for an owner to witness their pet having an epileptic seizure can be traumatic and frightening. There is a tendency for the owner to panic, feeling helpless and hopeless during the epileptic event. People often want to support the animal having a seizure with verbalizations, assurances and petting the canine.

Unfortunately, pet owners are unconsciously communicating their own concern and panic resulting in an exacerbation of the seizure episode. It is important to abbreviate these episodes.

The purpose of this paper is to document a simple and effective technique for controlling canine epileptic seizures and the results obtained by its use. Subsequent to initial observations, fifty-one canine epileptic patients in ictus have been successfully treated using this technique in the veterinary hospital, an emergency clinic, and by clients at home. The technique involves the application of block, cubed, or crushed ice on the back of the patient during ictus.

This technique is in no way intended to replace traditional medical care. Its effectiveness is directed at aborting ictus with concomitant benefits. An additional advantage is that this technique provides the doctor, veterinary staff, and client with a simple method of intervention and an opportunity to avoid the use of excessive levels of medication. It is also a procedure that the client can safely administer at home.

Materials and Methods

Ice applied as soon as the seizure is observed. The application itself is either a block of ice (i.e., water frozen in a metal ice tray applied directly to the seizing patient), or ice (cubes or crushed in a plastic bag). The ice is held firmly to the canine's back, on the area superior to the spinal process from T10 (palpable at the 'low spot' on the canine spine) to L4 (As shown in Figure 1). The size of the given ice application is sufficient to cover the described area. Maintain firm pressure in that location until the patient spontaneously recovers sternal recumbency and makes efforts to rise and walk. If the patient is prone to 'chain' episodes or displays evidence of returning to ictus after the removal of the ice, the ice should once again be applied until the patient regains sternal recumbency (when chain seizures occur, aggressive medical intervention is necessary) Clients have used bags or boxes of frozen vegetables, but such applications are reported to be less effective.

Celebrating Elaina

Dear CGA Members:

It is with a great deal of sadness that we must report the passing of Elaina on December, 10, 2008. She was about 14 1/2 years old and was suffering from the grave effects of acute renal failure. She went peacefully at the Dumb Friends League of Denver where we made a contribution her/your name.

Some of you will recall that she was the dog who was found as a stray in Greeley and was pregnant. She came to CGA in mid-2002 and gave birth to 10 pups; some of you have one (or more-?) of them. She and her kids were taken care of by Jody Laughlin and others as well as by Dr. Paul Boehm of Highland Animal Hospital. She was fostered by John and Susan Hodin. We were interviewed by Jane Taylor and Elaina came home with us in October 2002.

She was very alpha and had a mind of her own which we liked. She loved her toys, ear rubs, car rides, and her four beds. She never did take to controlling the excessive rabbit and squirrel population in our yard, but heaven help cats.

We loved her dearly and she loved us. She is dearly missed.

Ask the trainer: The best way to adopt a second dog

Question: We are planning to adopt a second dog. What's the best way to introduce the two dogs?

The Trainer

Answers: A successful first meeting between your resident dog and a new dog can help to ensure an easier integration of your new dog into your household. Some planning will help this first meeting to be a success.

First, how does your resident dog do when introduced to new dogs? Do you have a friendly dog with good social skills? Some dogs are very friendly but have poor social skills which can cause problems! Is your dog territorial at home or even in your neighborhood? If your dog has poor social skills, any potential dog-dog issues, space issues or territorial issues, then you will need to be more careful. The same questions apply for the new dog.

If there are any doubts, it's best to err on the side of caution and set yourself up for success. It's best to have one person to handle each dog. Rather than bringing the new dog into your house, with your other dog waiting just inside, it's best to bring your new dog into the house with your resident dog safely elsewhere. Give the new dog a chance to check out the new surroundings and check out the smells without a face-to-face meeting at the door.

The actual dog to dog introduction is best handled outdoors. If there are any concerns about territoriality or space issues, plan for the dogs to meet outdoors in neutral territory where there is plenty of space, such as a local park. If your dog is territorial in your neighborhood, a park that you do not frequent is best.

Start by having one person walking each dog, on leash, apart from each other. Rather than approaching head-on, you should gradually join up with the other dog walking in the same direction. Start by walking farther apart, so the dogs can see each other but not get too close. Gradually walk closer together until you are walking side by side. This gives the dogs a chance to get used to each other and check each other out without the pressure of coming at each other head-on. It is very important to keep the leashes as loose as possible but still keep hold in case you need to separate the dogs. If each person holds tightly to the leashes, you create tension for the dogs and could cause a problem that might not otherwise have occurred because they are picking up on your tension.

When you bring the dogs home, allow them to meet again outside the house, and then bring one in at a time. Do not walk them in together, as tight doorways are prime locations for dog-dog scuffles. Bring one all the way in away from the door, and then bring the other one inside.

Provide close supervision at first to ensure there are no problems. In particular, keep an eye on doorways and other

Chuck Galloway will sincerely be missed

Back in late July, 2006, my wife, Lynne and I were assigned to do a Home Visit with Chuck and Colleen Galloway. They lived on the West side of Lakewood, and Chuck was retired but Colleen was still working. The Galloways had a Sussex Spaniel named Misty, and their only concern with adopting a Greyhound was that Misty and the Greyhound might not get along.

We had just adopted another Greyhound named Maggie, and the Galloway family was her first home visit after being placed into our home. We weren't sure how she and Misty would get along. We requested that the Galloways bring Misty out to the front sidewalk a couple of houses down the street to have them meet, and Maggie and Misty appeared to get along very well..

When we got into the house after the dogs met, it was obvious that Chuck and Colleen were naturals to adopt a Greyhound. We approved them immediately on their adoption request. During the home visit, we began to talk about transportation of Greyhounds at retirement to area veterinarians as part of the retirement process. Chuck showed immediate interest in the transportation information when he found out how well the new retirees became adapted to the new lifestyle that they faced, and how fast they learned the ways of the new lifestyle. Chuck eagerly expressed a desire to become a transporter.

Chuck and Colleen were invited to view a Greyhound named Tane to see if they would like to adopt. They did, and he fit right in to their household immediately.

A short time later, I was assigned a transport. I called Chuck to see if he would like to ride along. He Was Thrilled!!! Chuck rode along to transport and was locked into transporting the retirees from that time on.

tight spaces, as well as anything that might be considered a valuable resource, such as food bowls, bones, toys, beds, or even you. Put away potential problem items, such as bones, when first bringing both dogs in the house.

If you detect any potential problems, address it in a positive manner quickly to prevent escalation into a fight. If you are not sure what signs to look for or how to address early warning signs, contact a professional who will help you to address it appropriately.

Punishment – even if it seems to work in the short term - is not the best way to address these issues, as you could make matters worse in the long run. Also, assuming that dogs will work things out themselves – although some will – is not always the best approach either. Help your dogs to make good choices rather than assuming everything will work out without your assistance.

Prevention is much easier than addressing problems that build up over time.

Chuck Galloway

Chuck transported a number of Greyhounds during his service to Colorado Greyhound Adoptions, and he was always an eager and willing volunteer. He was the best for the retired Greyhounds, and he always had Misty sitting in the front of the car with him while the retiree was in the back. I always suspected that Misty had a lot to do with calming down the new retiree for the ride to the new life. I also believe that Tane went along on some of the rides too. In some cases, Chuck would transport two Greys per day for CGA, and sometimes they would ride together in the car.

I can't express appropriately in this document what a sincere, thoughtful and kind individual Chuck was, or how much he accomplished for CGA, but I can relate that when Chuck passed on, Colorado Greyhound Adoptions lost a very involved, committed and hard working volunteer that will be hard to replace.
